Did you know...?

Epilepsy is the most common neurological disorder in childhood.

It affects one in two hundred children.

As many as 30 percent continue to have seizures, as well as a range of related disabilities including learning, physical and emotional difficulties.

In the UK alone, epilepsy affects over 75,000 children and young people.

Epilepsy is as common a condition as type one diabetes.

Anyone, at any age and at any time can be affected.

So how can you help?

Become a volunteer at The National Centre for Young People with Epilepsy and help children and young people with complex epilepsy get the most from life.

“She never lets me down”

The National Centre for Young People with Epilepsy (NCYPE) is the UK's major provider of specialist services for children and young people with complex epilepsy.

A national charity, the services offered by The NCYPE are both unique and essential. The NCYPE offers education on a residential or day basis at St Piers School for children aged between 5 to 19, and at St Piers Further Education College for students aged between 16 to 25.

In addition, The NCYPE also offers a variety of rehabilitation and assessment services as well as research and information.

Based in Lingfield, Surrey, The NCYPE concentrates on the needs of those most severely affected by epilepsy in the UK with the aim of securing better futures for these children and young people.

How can you help us?

- Being a helper in school, college or care services
- Being a buddy driver
- Helping with extra curricular activities
- Helping with outdoor activities
- Supporting our medical and assessment centre
- Assisting in administration work
- Helping with our fundraising activities

How big is the commitment?

We appreciate any support you can give us, no matter how big or small. We will try and work with you on a programme to fit your diary.

Will I get training?

The NCYPE will provide you with the necessary training which can be extended to try and fit in with your own interests.

Will I be out of pocket?

We will repay your travel costs and lunch is provided if you are here for more than four hours in any one day.
